Multi-State Poll - Mississippi Findings
July 2020
Survey Methodology

TargetSmart designed and administered this multimodal survey. Forty-eight interviews were conducted online among panelists who were matched to the TargetSmart voter file (52 weighted), 370 interviews were conducted online using text-to-web and email-to-web (66 email, 304 SMS) solicits from the TargetSmart voter file (357 weighted), and 39 interviews (48 weighted) were conducted over the phone (17 on wireless phones, 22 on landlines). In total, the survey reached 457 adults, age 18 or older, who are registered to vote in Mississippi. Quotas were designed to reflect the demographic and geographic distribution of registered voters in Mississippi. The data were weighted by gender, age, race from file, TargetSmart Partisan Score, TargetSmart High School Only Score, and region by media market to ensure an accurate reflection of the population.

The credibility interval (the theoretical margin of error for a blended-methodology poll that relies partially on telephone-based probability sampling, and partially on non-probability based online panel sampling) is +/- 4.6%. The margin of error for subgroups is larger and varies. Percentage totals may not add up precisely due to rounding.
Issue Environment and the Role of State Government
Issue Environment: Key Findings

Mississippi

- Mississippi voters are highly pessimistic about the direction of the U.S. (26 percent right direction, 66 percent wrong track). Voters are more mixed, but pessimistic on net, about the direction of the state (33 percent right direction, 52 percent wrong track).

- Top issue priorities for Mississippians are quite diffuse -- preserving the state flag (24 percent), systematic racism and the Black Lives Matter movement (19 percent), and the coronavirus (18 percent) surface as some of the most pressing issues facing the state today.

  Mississippi deviates from other trends we are seeing in this body of research -- voters in most other states, including other southern states like Georgia and Florida, are clearly prioritizing the coronavirus pandemic over any other issues that were cited.

- When it comes to the status of the coronavirus, a solid majority of voters believe the worst is still yet to come (58 percent). Fewer than 1-in-5 voters believe the worst is over (17 percent).

- We also see a bare majority of Mississippi voters indicate that their feelings about how Black people and communities are treated in American have changed over the last month in light of recent events (52 percent).

Election and Democracy Reforms
Democracy Key Findings: Government's Role, Voting Options, and Intersection with Race

Mississippi

- Election administration surfaces as the top policy area Mississippi voters would like government to play a role in, with 92 percent of voters believing state government should play a “major” or “some” role in safely and fairly administering elections.

- Furthermore, a majority of voters are optimistic about how elections will be administered in November, with 2-in-3 voters believing they will be run well (65 percent), compared to just 1-in-5 voters believing they will not be run well (26 percent).

- An overwhelming majority of Mississippians plan to vote in-person on Election Day (80 percent). Voting early in-person (8 percent) and voting by mail (10 percent) are not popular voting options for the Mississippi electorate.

- We also find that a majority of Mississippi voters want state government to reduce barriers that stop Black people and communities from voting (57 percent).
Democracy Key Findings: Voting Reforms

Mississippi

- While very few Mississippi voters plan to vote by mail in November (10 percent), voters generally support policies to make voting by mail easier.

- We find that 63 percent of voters support allowing any registered Mississippi voter to vote-by-mail and 54 percent of voters support mailing all registered Mississippi voters applications to vote by mail.

- Mississippi voters are also broadly supportive of reforms to make processing mail-in ballots easier. A majority of voters support counting mail-in ballots postmarked by, but received after Election Day (56 percent). Likewise, 48 percent of voters support counting mail-in ballots received by Election Day but received up to 10 days after election Day.

- While voting early in-person is not a popular option for voters in Mississippi, voter are broadly supportive of lengthening the early voting window and letting voters cast a ballot up through the day before Election Day (78 percent).
Democracy Key Findings: Coronavirus and Voting

Mississippi

- Mississippi voters strongly agree with measures to increase safety and sanitary standards at polling places.

- Over 9-in-10 voters agree with both equipping poll workers with PPE like masks and gloves (95 percent) and conforming with CDC guidelines and social distancing at polling locations (92 percent).

- Voters are also supportive of opening additional polling locations to reduce crowds (86 percent) and oppose consolidating polling places in anticipation of poll worker shortages (66 percent oppose).
Democracy Key Findings: Voting Security

Mississippi

- While voting by mail is unpopular among the Mississippi electorate, voters here still place a high importance on voting security as it pertains to mail in ballots.

- Over 8-in-10 voters believe ballot tracking for mail-in ballots is important (86 percent), with 7-in-10 voters believing this to be very important (70 percent).

- Likewise, nearly 9-in-10 voters believe it is important for election officials to immediately notify voters if there is a problem with their submitted mail-in ballot (85 percent), and 76 percent of voters find this to be very important.

Fiscal Policy and the Economy
Mississippi

- Mississippians express more concern about the pandemic’s impact on health and safety (54 percent) than they do about the impact on jobs and income (38 percent).

- Furthermore, a majority of Mississippi voters believe businesses should be required to provide safe working environments and be held liable if they do not (52 percent), while just 30 percent of voters believe businesses should be protected from liability if an employee gets sick on the job.

- Acute concerns about employment and small businesses surface. Nearly 9-in-10 voters express concerns about small business closures in Mississippi (87 percent) and losing work and income (90 percent).
Mississippi voters want more state investment in services over lower taxes and budget cuts. A majority of voters believe state government in Mississippi should invest more in its residents to ensure they are safe, healthy, and economically secure (55 percent), while just 19 percent of voters believe state government should keep taxes low by cutting funding to education, infrastructure, and unemployment.

At the same time, Mississippi voters are also concerned about the state of Mississippi losing tax revenues and facing budget cuts in the wake of the coronavirus pandemic (76 percent).

Mississippians want corporations and the wealthy to pay their fair share, strongly supporting progressive revenue streams such as closing corporate tax loopholes, increasing taxes on companies that pollute, increasing taxes on the wealthiest Mississippians and corporations, and establishing a carbon tax.
Economic and Fiscal Key Findings: Economy and Workplace Policies

Mississippi

- Nearly seven-in-ten Mississippi voters believe state government should have a role in addressing systematic racism (68 percent), and a solid majority of voters believe state government should address economic barriers faced by Black people and the Black community (58 percent).

- Mississippians want state government to play a role in making pay equity a reality, with 84 percent of voters believing state government should play a “major” or “some” role in ensuring equal pay for equal work.

- Mississippi voters also solidly support extending the length of time that laid-off workers can receive unemployment compensation and increasing the amount they receive (65 percent).

- Most voters also see a role for government in workplace policies such as ensuring access to affordable childcare (74 percent major or some role) and ensuring workers have access to paid sick days and family leave (77 percent major or some role).

- It follows that workplace policies resonate strongly with the Mississippi electorate -- 88 percent of voters support creating an insurance plan to provide aid family and medical leave for employees, 83 percent of voters support paid sick requirements, and 73 percent support eliminating tax breaks for corporations that don't offer paid sick and family leave to their employees.
Economic and Fiscal Key Findings: Health Policy

Mississippi

• We find that policies relating to health care and health insurance during the coronavirus pandemic are some of the most resonant economic proposals tested in this survey.

• Near-consensus public opinion emerges around the following policies related to health insurance and health care:
  • Extending grace periods for people to pay health insurance bills (93 percent support).
  • Offering Mississippians public health insurance options (91 percent support).
  • Limiting what drug companies can charge for prescription drugs (90 percent support).
  • Banning the practice of surprise medical billing (86 percent support).

Recommendations
Democracy and Voting Narrative

- Over 9-in-10 Mississippi voters want state government to play an active role in election administration, and most voters are quite confident in it’s ability to do so.

- Voting in-person on Election day remains the most popular voting option for Mississippians. Although voting by mail is less popular, the voting and democracy narrative should be centered on legislators’ efforts to ensure safe and secure elections, regardless of how Mississippians vote. This narrative should ensure both safety at in-person polling places and reliability when it comes to voting by mail in attempt to encourage more voters to pursue vote-by-mail as an option.

- When it comes to voting in-person, legislators should focus the narrative around increase safety and sanitation standards at polling places, opening additional polling locations to reduce crowds, and lengthening the early voting window so voters have more time to cast their ballots early in-person.

- On vote by mail, legislators should highlight their efforts to streamline ballot processing, provide prepaid postage for ballots, and improve ballot tracking and notifications about ballot issues.
Fiscal Policy and Economy Narrative

• Mississippians prioritize state investment in core services and they see an array of progressive avenues for raising the revenue to make that happen.

• Voters express strong concerns about losing work and income and small business closures in Mississippi due to the pandemic, and any economic narrative should be cognizant of these realities.

• Legislators should use a narrative that strikes the right balance between prioritizing health and safety and helping working families who are suffering and struggling to make ends meet.

• To do this, we recommend making workplace policies that benefit the employee AND employer a focal point of the narrative. Highlighting legislators’ efforts to establish workplace liability during the pandemic, paid sick and paid family leave requirements, and affordable childcare for Mississippians.

• Since health care policy resonates strongly with Mississippians, we recommend making this part of the fiscal and economic narrative as well. Particularly highlighting policies that aim to extend grace periods for paying insurance bills, limit what drug companies can charge for prescriptions, offer public health insurance plans, and ban surprise medical billing.
